TRAINS RUNNING LATE.

Union Pacific Is Still Experiencing Trouble in Mainaining Schedule.

The Union Pacific is still having some trouble getting its trains through on time, No. 1, the Oreland Limited from Chicago, and No. 7, the Los Angeles Limited cago, and No. 7, the Los Angeles Limited from the east, arriving several hours late in Ogden last night.

With this exception the railroads are experiencing little or no difficulty with time tables, the Oregon Short Line, Denver & Rio Grande and Salt Lake Route reporting everything on time or only a few minutes behind schedule.

Warm Weather Leads to Difficulty.

Reports to the contrary notwithstanding, the coal situation in Salt Lake at present is far from being a problem which can be easily solved. At least, this is the opinion of several of the largest coal dealers in the city, and they should know something about the question.

When asked as to their ability to fill orders, the manager of one of the largest firms in the city had the following to say:
"This talk about the railroads being able to the ground are convinced that there This talk about the railroads being able to get enough coal and to spare into the city to supply all demands is all tommyrot, for the present at least. While one cause of the shortage may be the holiday season, it must be remembered that there have been several extremely heavy snow-terms in this part of the country and have been several extremely heavy show-storms in this part of the country and when these storms are sufficiently heavy to Steamboat Springs, Colo., with the ultione, is the fact that the public has gotten the idea into its head that there is a coal shortage all over the country and that the mines will not be able to supply enough coal for summer consumption.

"It is not the fault of the mines, and it is not the fault of the railroats. The former are turning our more than enough. This pattern is cut in three sizes, 22, 26 and 30 waist measure. Size 26 requires 4 yards of 36 inch material. when these storms are sufficiently heavy to hold up passenger trains sometimes as much as from five to ten hours, it is useless to say that coal trains are not being delayed.

"The railroad companies, however, are doing nobly, and I do not wish to detract from them in any way. The conditions this winter are rather unusual, the good weather up until a short time ago preventing the people from ordering in advance, with the result that everyone made a grand rush when the first snow appeared, and literally swamped coal dealers all through the city with orders. Then another cause, and to my mind the vital one, is the fact that the public has gotten the idea into its head that there is a coal
